

Wu Ming, Female

Master Degree in Organic Chemistry

Research Librarian /Chief User Officer

During 2006 to 2016, being a subject librarian mainly engaged in the chemistry information resources organization, academic liaison, consultation and reference service, information literacy education, user information needs and information behavior study, information environment construction and other related research, also deeply involved in embedded into the research institutes to provide the user-oriented service of knowledge and personalized, ranging from information analysis to academic intelligence evaluation, and research data management and data literacy education around research lifecycle.

More than 50 academic papers have been published in the core journals published or domestic and foreign conference. And also several projects of Chinese Academy of Sciences and National Science Technology Library have been undertaken.

The research direction will track user service on the new trends and best practices of the international library, focus on the user information needs, the user information utilization behavior, the library new service promotion, data Management services, information and data quality education around scientific life cycle and library new knowledge services, and explore organization and model of embedded library services to meeting user' knowledge and personalized needs in the e-science environment.